Kathleen:

I am not set up for telephone card charges. A cheque is fine, I am not in a rush for it, so if it gets delayed by mail that's OK.

Hello, Bart.

Now, there's talk here of a postal disruption.

Instead of throwing it in the mail and risk losing it, do notaries take Paypal?

Or, can I give you my Master Card for the last $30.00 ?

I'm going to presume you can take the card:

Hi
I acknowledge receipt of the $200 already paid. You can simply send the balance at your earliest convenience.
Thanks

Hi, Bart.

The way your account is written, it means I currently owe you $230.16 CASH.
No mention is made that $200 CASH was paid, and only the balance of $30.16 is due.

Sorry to put your secretary to extra work.

Kind regards.

Hello, Bart.

Your last $30 is on the way as a Canada Post money order.

My chip card has been malfunctioning, and it has poured with rain for days.

The rain stopped today so I could make the long walk to get the cash to pay for the money order.

It went in the mail at the Post Office itself (not a substation) just before 17:00 today.

Kind regards.
